Biography

Chere is an Australian trained Surgeon who has a long-term commitment to providing specialist General and Breast Surgery services to regional Australians.

Chere obtained her Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery from Flinders University in 2007 and trained in General Surgery at Monash Health. Chere was awarded the Fellowship of the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons (FRACS) in General Surgery in 2018. Chere has a commitment to lifelong learning and in 2022, she was awarded a Masters of Surgery (Breast Surgery) from the University of Sydney.

Chere is the current Chair of the Gippsland Regional integrated Cancer Service (GRICS) Breast Cancer Team and also works with BreastScreen Victoria.

Chere has completed an Emergency and General Surgery Fellowship in Regional Victoria. During this Fellowship she was a Deakin University lecturer, steering committee member for the Sepsis Collaboration.

In 2019 she commenced Breast Cancer subspecialty fellowship at the Royal Melbourne and Royal Women's Hospital (BreastSurgANZ).

Chere is involved in clinic research. Her recent work includes being principle investigator for a clinical trial in Magseed localisation for Breast Cancer Surgery.

Chere provides specialisation in breast, general and emergency surgery to the local Gippsland community. Chere is GESA accredited.

In her spare time, she enjoys her cattle farm with her young family in Neerim South.
